

MAIL to SELF

Dear Daughter,

The day you were born was the most significant day for me as my life transformed thereafter. I was unaware that my entire existence will be for someone else and I would start caring for your future and you the way I do.

My college friends always called me a daredevil in my younger years. After all, I was ready to face whatever challenges I had to face then. I never hesitated to accept their challenges as I loved the adrenaline rush.

However, something strange happened after you were born. My friends challenged me to perform a dangerous act. The moment I was on my bike, I remembered you and decided not to do it. I realized that day that I am a father now and my priorities in my life should be reset.

I am writing this letter to you to thank you for changing my life. It is because of you that I am a kind and affectionate person now. I am thankful to the Almighty for blessing me either a daughter like you.

Your dad
