Dear Daughter,

Congratulations on this big day of yours!

You made the entire family proud by becoming a part of such a renowned university. I do not doubt your capabilities and judgment but cannot stop worrying as a mother. So, let me take this opportunity to share some things that I wish I was aware of when I was in college.

Always remember to make your friends sensibly? This is a phase in your life when your company will have a big influence on you. Hence, you should always select people who can support you and be by your side even during challenging times.

There will always be a guy who may break your heart. However, not let the breakup define your personality or identity. I know it is not easy to move on and yet during times like these, remember I am there for you. Also, remember you are a gorgeous woman with an equally beautiful heart.

Go and win the world!

Love, mom
