Dear Husband,

I hope you are doing well when you read this.

Do you remember one of the special vows we had made during one of our dates? We had promised each other to create a beautiful little munchkin. Finally, the day has come when we can expect our guests to enter our lives and make them beautiful. Yes, we are pregnant, honey. I got back the report from my gynecologist, and it's confirmed- it's been 6 weeks now. I, Elizabeth Barton, write this letter to express my gratitude to you for making me a mother.

Ever since you proposed to me last year, I have been dreaming of carrying our baby and leading a happy life with you. Now, as we stand on the precipice of making that dream come true, I have no one to thank but you for this. You have given me much love during our courtship and married days. With this gift, you have showered over me more blessings. I hope you are as excited as I am about this wonderful new journey. I also hope you are ready for a wild ride and sleepless nights- my guess is our baby is going to be as restless as you (*wink*).

Forever grateful,

Your loving wife,
